Timing Procedures

In order to keep our competition on schedule and take advantage of the time the judges are scoring the previous group, we have instituted the following procedures to allow the next group to set their equipment on stage as soon as the stage is cleared and ready for their performance. The setting of the equipment is “on the clock” and is part of the 25 minute time allotment.

 While the actual performance schedule may be in 30 minute rotations, the time limit remains 25 minutes for all groups.

The timing procedures are as follows:

1. As soon as the stage is cleared and the risers are set and ready, your group will be allowed to bring your equipment on stage. The clock will start as soon as the first person sets foot on the stage.
2. The director will notify the stage timer when all equipment has been set and the group is ready for the performance. At this time the clock will be stopped.
3. If the judges are ready for the next group, the curtain will open and the Emcee will make the group's introduction. As soon as the introduction is made, the clock will start on the first down beat or musical note. The clock then will run continuously until the performance is finished and all equipment, crew and performers have left the stage.
4. If the judges are not ready for the group, the curtain will remain closed until the judges have signaled they are ready. During this waiting period, the director is free to move around the stage giving last minute instructions, checking instruments, etc. As soon as the judges are ready, the stage timer will ask the director if they are ready for the introduction. If so the procedure is per item #3 above. If the director now indicates they are not ready, the clock will start until the director indicates they are ready for the introduction. The clock will then stop for the introduction as per item #3 above.
